About the British Election Study

David Butler and Donald Stokes founded the British Election Study (BES) in 1964. They did so with the aim of understanding political change in Britain. Their project transformed the study of electoral behaviour. Indeed, it was so successful that a version of the BES has run after every general election ever since.

Almost six decades later, the BES is now one of the world's longest-running social surveys. After every general election, the BES surveys a representative sample of the British electorate. It asks them what they believe, what they think about parties and politicians, and how they voted. The BES team then makes these world-class data available for free, as part of its commitment to public engagement and impact.

A consortium of the University of Manchester, the University of Oxford, and Royal Holloway, University of London runs the British Election Study, 2019-2026. The team comprises Ed Fieldhouse, Jane Green, Geoff Evans, Jon Mellon, Chris Prosser, Jack Bailey, James Griffiths, and Stuart Perrett.

Citing the 2024 BES Post-Election Random Probability Survey

If you use the 2024 BES Post-Election Random Probability Survey data, it is important that you cite them. Not only is this good practice, it also allows the BES team to track how the data have been used. This, in turn, helps to prove the tremendous contribution that the BES makes to our understanding of British politics.

Study Details

Overview

The 2024 BES Post-Election Random Probability Survey is an address-based random probability sample of eligible voters. It corresponds to the 2024 UK General Election that took place on 4 July 2024. At this election, the Labour Party, led by Sir Keir Starmer, was the largest party, winning a landslide majority of 411 seats on 34.6% of the vote. The Conservative Party, led by Prime Minister Rishi Sunak, came in second. It won 121 seats on 24.4% of the vote. The Liberal Democrats, led by Sir Ed Davey, came third in terms of seats: winning 72 seats on 12.6% of the vote. Reform UK, led by Nigel Farage, came third in terms of votes cast on 14.7%, but only won 5 seats.

In total, 3,089 people completed the survey. Of these 2,596 lived in England, 333 lived in Scotland, and 160 lived in Wales. Further, survey respondents lived in 301 different parliamentary constituencies.

Most respondents were interviewed face-to-face in their own home (2,617), with a small minority (472) choosing to answer a push-to-web questionnaire. Importantly, all survey respondents are drawn from the original probability sample, so that this survey still represents a random probability sample of the British voting eligible population.

Ipsos conducted fieldwork between 5th July and 10th November 2024. Push-to-web data collection occurred between the 8th of November 2024 and 11th of December 2024. For in-depth details on the data collection process, see the technical report document.

Finally, the survey also included a self-completed Comparative Study of Electoral Systems (CSES) module. 52.7 percent of respondents completed this module (1,627 of 3,089).

Survey Weights

The 2024 BES Post-Election Survey uses gold-standard random probability methods. Still, it is important to ensure that it is representative of the target population. In this case, we take as our target all adults aged 18 or over who live in Great Britain and who are also eligible to vote.

IPSOS have provided three separate weights: a selection weight including capping (`wt_sel_capped`), a demographic post-stratification weight that is capped selection plus uncapped demographic weights for all respondents (`Wt_BES`), and a combined CSES weight that is capped selection plus demographic weights for respondents completing the CSES questionnaire (`Wt_CSES`).

Two stages of weighting were applied: initially, selection weights to correct for unequal selection probabilities and secondly post-stratification weights which account for differing levels of response from various groups in the population. The post-stratification weights were based on the latest ONS mid-year estimates, using three variables (gender by age, and region). For further details, see the technical report document. In addition, we include weight variables for the estimated vote eligible population (VEP), which were created by the BES team to adjust for: 1) ineligible voters in the population estimate, and 2) the percentage of votes received by each party in the General Election.

In version 1.0.1 of the 2024 BES Face-to-Face Post-Election Survey dataset, we have included improved versions of two important survey weights: `wt_demog`, which adjusts for key demographic characteristics, and `wt_vote`, which further calibrates the sample to vote shares, as reported by the House of Commons Library, and our estimates of turnout<sup>1</sup> among the voting eligible population. These weights have been developed using bespoke census tables from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and National Records of Scotland (NRS). The enhanced population benchmarks allow for more precise demographic alignment between the survey sample and the 2024 Voting Eligible Population in England, Scotland, and Wales.

More specifically, we use official population data from the 2021 Census for England and Wales and the 2022 Census for Scotland to construct demographic weighting targets. These census datasets provide authoritative benchmarks for the following demographic variables: age, sex, region and education. In addition, we commissioned datasets from each census to estimate the voting eligible population among relevant demographic subgroups: country of birth (UK or British Crown Dependencies; Ireland; Commonwealth countries or British Overseas Territories; rest of world) by age by highest level of qualification (binary Level 4 qualifications or above) by bespoke passport held (UK or Ireland or Commonwealth countries or British Overseas Territories; Other passport; No passport held) across England, Wales, Scotland, as well as Government Office Regions, for all usual residents aged 18 or over in households.

The content of these tables ensures consistent weighting estimates can be obtained given differences in variable definitions and classification schemes across the ONS and NRS. We then use these harmonised census margins to weight the BES respondents via a post-stratification procedure, ensuring that the achieved sample accurately reflects the demographic composition of the voting eligible population in England, Scotland, and Wales in 2024. We apply standard quality controls, including the inspection of weight distributions and the trimming of extreme weights to maintain statistical efficiency.

<sup>1</sup>The estimate that we use suggests that VEP turnout in 2024 was 57.6%. This is 2.1 percentage points lower than the official registered electors turnout estimate of 59.7% (Sturge 2024).

We make the following assumptions regarding an individual's eligibility to have voted in the 2024 general election: those born in the UK, Crown Dependencies, or Ireland, are assumed to be eligible to vote regardless of their passport status. People born in Commonwealth countries are included if they hold a UK, Irish, or Commonwealth passport, or if they have no passport (for example, because their passport has expired), but not if they only hold another (non-Commonwealth) passport. Those born elsewhere in the world are classed as eligible only if they have a UK, Irish, or Commonwealth passport.

Our version 1.0.1 weights differ from those in version 1.0.0 in two main ways. First, our updated weights now use data from NRS to create targets of the voting eligible population in Scotland. The previously released versions of our weights relied on targets of the voting age population, using overall 2022 census tables, since more granular census data was unavailable at the time of our initial release. Second, our updated weights incorporate slightly modified voting eligibility criteria. Previously, those who were born in a Commonwealth country and had an "Other" passport (but not UK, Commonwealth, or Irish passport) were considered eligible when constructing our targets. For the new weighting targets, these individuals are classified as ineligible.

Version 1.0.1 of the 2024 BES Post-Election Random Probability Survey contains 5 weighting variables:

- `wt_sel_wt`: Selection weight including capping (all modes)
- `Wt_BES`: Selection + poststratification weights, BES sample
- `Wt_CSES`: Selection + poststratification weights, CSES sample
- `wt_demog`: VEP demographic weight (all modes)
- `wt_vote`: VEP self-reported vote weight (all modes)
- `wt_demog_cses`: VEP demographic weight (CSES only)
- `wt_vote_cses`: VEP self-reported vote weight (CSES only)

Paradata

The 2024 BES Post-Election Random Probability Survey also includes “paradata”. Whereas question data record respondents’ answers, paradata record contextual information on how these data were collected. For example, “SurveyMode” records the survey format each respondent used.

Below are a list of all relevant paradata:

- Y48: Who else was present during interview?
- FINALSERIALNO: Respondent’s unique serial number
- CSES_MODE: CSES survey mode
- BES_MODE: BES main survey mode
- CONSTIT_NAME: Constituency name
- CONSTIT_CODE: Constituency code
- REGION: Respondent’s government office region
- LA_UA_CODE: Respondent’s local authority unitary area code
- LA_UA_NAME: Respondent’s local authority unitary area name
- DATE_OF_INTERVIEW: Date of interview
- DWELLING_TYPE: Type of dwelling
- PANO: Respondent’s press association constituency ID
- WT_SEL_WT: Selection weight including capping (all modes)
- WT_BES: Selection + poststratification weights, BES sample
- WT_CSES: Selection + poststratification weights, CSES sample
- INTERVIEWER: Pseudoanonymised interviewer code (F2F only)
- MSOA: Middle Super Output Area (MSOA) code
- SEG: Socio-economic group
- SC: Socio-economic class
- NS_SEC: NS-SEC code
- NS_SEC_ANALYTIC: NS-SEC code (analytic version)
- ONSCONSTID: ONS Constituency ID
- CONSTITUENCYNAME: Constituency Name
- CONSTITUENCYTYPE: County or Borough Constituency
- WT_DEMOG: VEP demographic weight (all modes)
- WT_VOTE: VEP self-reported vote weight (all modes)
- WT_DEMOG_CSES: VEP demographic weight (CSES only)
- WT_VOTE_CSES: VEP self-reported vote weight (CSES only)

Change Log

In the interest of transparency, we provide a change log that lists all updates and changes made to the data and the documentation over time. If you think you have found a problem with either, please contact us via <https://www.britishelectionstudy.com>.

Version 1.0.0

- Initial version of data and documentation.

Version 1.0.1

- Updated our weighting system to reflect our estimate of the voting eligible population in Scotland (alongside England and Wales), so some weighting variables might be very slightly different.
- Added Middle Super Output Area (MSOA) variable to the secure access version of the data, which can be used to link small area data (e.g. from the Census).
